INTRODUCTION AND PURPOSE

Lankaran State University supports the active participation of students in academic, scientific, and social life through student-led organizations. This policy defines the general principles, governance structure, and key areas of activity of these organizations. Its primary purpose is to ensure the representation of student interests, promote their involvement in decision-making processes, and support their overall personal and professional development.

SCOPE AND GOVERNANCE

This policy applies to the Student Youth Organization, the Student Colleagues Union, and the Student Scientific Society operating within the University. Each organization functions under a structured leadership consisting of a chairperson and members and operates based on principles of transparency, accountability, and democratic participation. Student representatives also take part in the University Scientific Council, where they contribute to discussions on student-related matters and act as a link between students and the university administration.

MAIN AREAS OF ACTIVITY

The Student Youth Organization focuses on protecting student rights and increasing their social and civic engagement by organizing educational programs, development initiatives, and awareness activities. It also encourages participation in projects, training programs, and international initiatives while promoting healthy and responsible lifestyles.

The Student Colleagues Union is primarily responsible for improving student welfare by providing social, legal, and, where applicable, financial support. It also contributes to the organization of cultural, recreational, and sports activities and promotes student involvement in volunteer and community service initiatives.

The Student Scientific Society supports the development of students' research skills and academic potential by engaging them in scientific activities. It organizes seminars, conferences, and academic events, encourages participation in research projects, and promotes student achievements in science and innovation.

STUDENT RIGHTS AND RESPONSIBILITIES

Students have the right to participate in these organizations, express their views freely, and take initiative in academic and social activities. At the same time, they are expected to follow university regulations, adhere to ethical standards, and actively contribute to the activities and objectives of the organizations.

MONITORING AND FINAL PROVISIONS

The activities of student organizations are regularly monitored and evaluated, and reports are submitted to the University Scientific Council. This policy ensures the effective functioning of student-led organizations and contributes to the development of an active, responsible, and engaged student community.

CONCLUSION

In conclusion, student-led organizations at Lankaran State University play a vital role in enhancing student engagement, promoting leadership, and supporting academic and social development. Through structured governance and active participation, these organizations contribute to a dynamic and inclusive university environment. The implementation of this policy ensures that students are empowered to take initiative, develop essential skills, and actively contribute to both university life and society as a whole.
