

FOREIGN PROFESSORS AND RESEARCHERS

Global Academic Cooperation at LSU

Lankaran State University annually strengthens international academic cooperation by inviting professors, lecturers, and researchers from reputable foreign universities. Through lectures, seminars, practical training, and joint academic activities, these collaborations enhance teaching quality, support the research environment, and promote international experience exchange.

In particular, at the Faculty of Veterinary Medicine, specialized classes, seminars, and master lectures are held every month with the participation of professors from Kafkas (Kars) University in order to strengthen the professional training of students. This activity is carried out continuously on the basis of a memorandum signed between the two universities and contributes to the development of international academic mobility.

In addition, meetings with lecturers and researchers from higher education institutions of other countries, joint projects, and experience-exchange programs contribute significantly to the expansion of the global partnership network at Lankaran State University, the improvement of international competencies of students and staff, as well as the enhancement of the university's international visibility.
